Raising the Hood

Michael D. Nutter, president of Boston University, stands on the steps of the university’s Shevlin Hall, offering a vision for the future of the university and the city. "This is the time to do bold and innovative things," he says. "This is the time to lead."
problems in their lives."

"The gallery is designed to be a place of contemplation and reflection. People will find it peaceful."

"The majority of exhibitions would be hung on the walls of the main hall, which opens up to the garden. The majority of public programs would be held in the garden area, which is a great place for people to gather and socialize."

"The museum's collection of 7,000 objects is on display at all times. Each object is carefully selected and arranged to tell a story."

"The museum's galleries are well-lit, providing a comfortable environment for visitors."

"The museum's library is located on the top floor, and it is open to the public."

"The museum's café is on the ground floor, and it offers a variety of refreshments."
